FALL 2023

Thank you for your interest in Crossway's academic titles. While our most recent releases cover a broad range of subjects, I couldn't help noticing that several of them address a question increasingly put to us: What does it mean to be human? This is perhaps the leading question of our time. And it can be approached from many angles, as we can see from the following titles.

Addressing the question of human limitation and weakness is Ministry in the New Realm: A Theology of 2 Corinthians, the newest addition to the New Testament Theology series. Dane Ortlund argues that Christ's death and resurrection inaugurated a paradoxical new realm in which human weakness is intertwined with God's power.

At the center of The Water and the Blood: How the Sacraments Shape Christian Identity is the question of human identity. Rather than something constructed or self-generated, Kevin Emmert shows that identity is given through Christ and, critically, ratified in the gospel sacraments. Baptism and Communion are identity-forming rituals which teach us what it means to be persons in Christ.

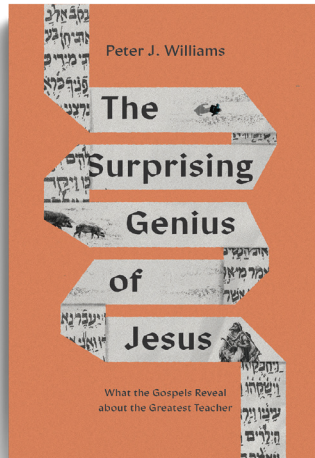

Addressing the issue of identity from another perspective is Carl Trueman's Crisis of Confidence: Reclaiming the Historic Faith in a Culture Consumed with Individualism and Identity. Trueman argues that creeds and confessions are more crucial than ever for Christians because they anchor us in history, offer a framework for thinking about God, anthropology, and ethics, and, above all, point us to the transcendent God who rules over all things.

We trust that these and the other books on the pages that follow will stimulate, challenge, and enlighten your thinking, and, even more, assist you to respond faithfully to the many pressing questions of our day—for the sake of Christ and the gospel.
